

Access to Work, United Kingdom (Inclusive Business Creation: Good Practice Compendium)

This case study presents an example of how people with disabilities can be supported in business creation with grants given through a mainstream support programme. The objectives of the programme are discussed and the rationale for providing this support is presented. The case study describes how the support works and how it can be accessed. Data on the results achieved are also presented. The key challenges faced in delivering this support are presented along with the conditions for transferring this approach to another context.
