

Executive summary (National Intellectual Property Systems, Innovation and Economic Development: With perspectives on Colombia and Indonesia)

Innovation plays a pivotal role in economic development: this is one important lesson of the past decades. The build-up of innovation capacities has been central to successful growth experiences. Intellectual property (IP) rights are important for building up those innovation capacities, and are even more pivotal in the knowledge economy where intangible assets are critical.

LinkToContentAt: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264204485-2-en>

Knowledge Type: Thematic report [1]

Other Tag: commercialisation [2]

access to finance [3]

access to knowledge [4]

utility models [5]

traditional sectors [6]

enforcement [7]

intellectual property system [8]

market conditions [9]

innovation system [10]

Parent URL: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264204485-en> [11]

Source URL: <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/document/executive-summary-national-intellectual-property-systems-innovation-and-economic>

Links

[1] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/knowledge-type/thematic-report-0>

[2] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/commercialisation>

[3] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/access-finance>

[4] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/access-knowledge>

[5] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/utility-models>

[6] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/traditional-sectors>

[7] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/enforcement>

[8] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/intellectual-property-system>

[9] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/market-conditions>

[10] <https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/innovation-system>

[11] <http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264204485-en>